STORY: City of Pomona Mayor Tim Sandoval and other community leaders will join Ray Adamyk, President of Spectra Company, one of the nation's leading restoration and preservation firms for a special groundbreaking ceremony to announce plans and a new vision for the YMCA Building in Pomona. Adamyk purchased the property last summer for $2.65 million and Spectra Company has begun restoring the historic landmark to its former glory.

"Our goal is to maintain the historic integrity of this landmark building while adaptively reusing the creative space in a sustainable manner that will support the visions and goals of our community," said Adamyk.

The approximately 80,000 square-foot property, built in 1920 and listed on the National Registry of Historic Places, includes two free-standing buildings. The new plans will consist of updated live/work spaces, newly designed creative offices, state of the art concert and special event venues, and a coffee bar/cafe and lounge for the community.
